

How To Find Out What Facebook Knows About You

By Bob Cusick (Spoiler Alert: AAAAAAAAH!)

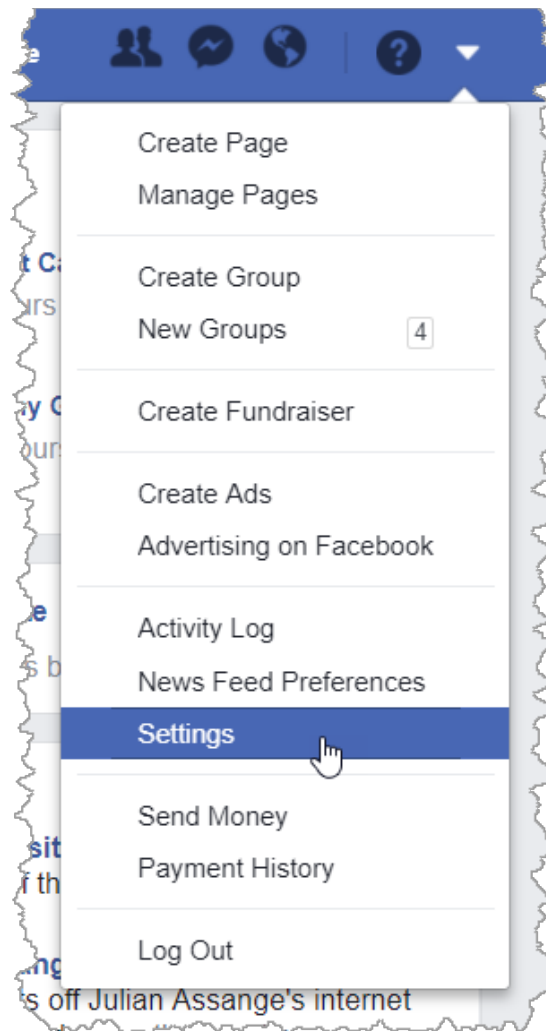

So, after I wrote the last PDF called “How To Stop (Some) Facebook Data Leaks” (download here: <https://bit.ly/2DLEJBV>) – I got to thinking about all the data that Facebook must store on me – and I wondered how far back it went.

So, I decided to download ALL the data that Facebook collected and IS STORING on me.

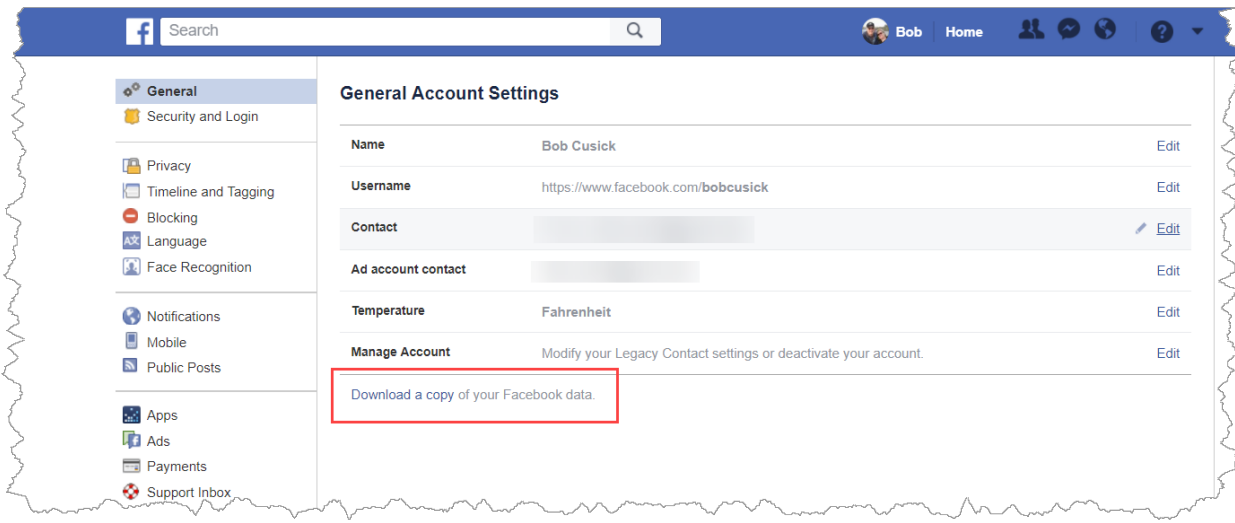

Whoa. What an eye-opener!

I’ll share some of my findings below – but for now, let’s get to the HOW you download your data.

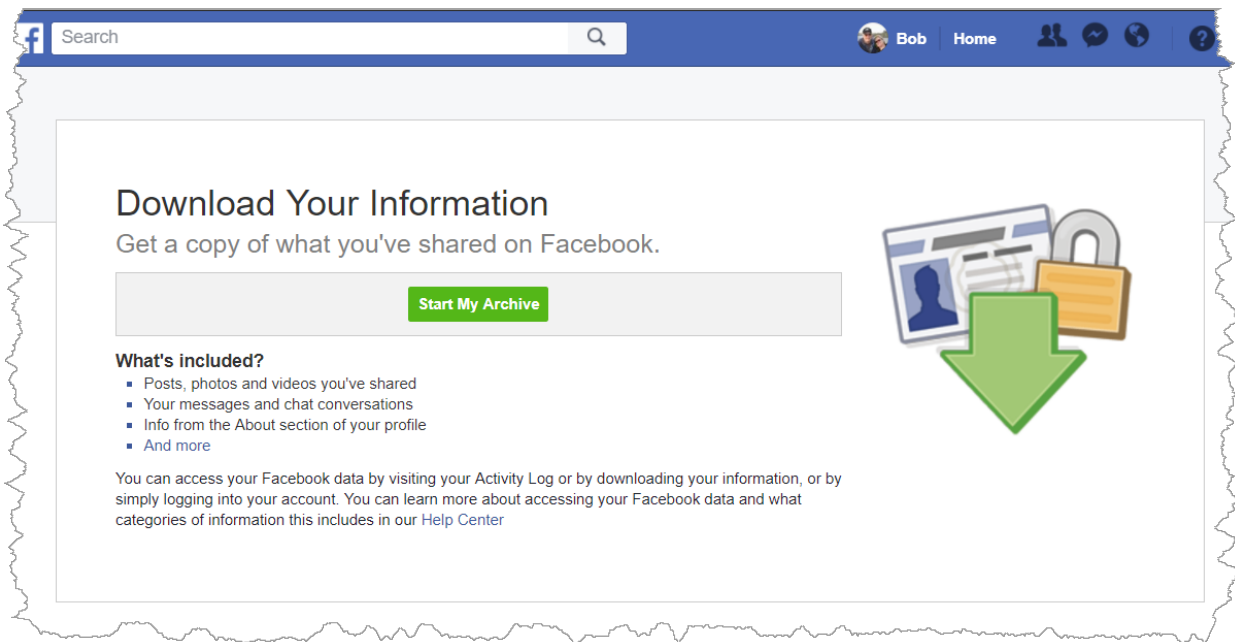

To get started – log into your Facebook account on a computer (not a mobile device) and click the “down icon” to the right of the “?” link and choose “Settings”:

Right on the first screen – you’ll see the link that you’re looking for:

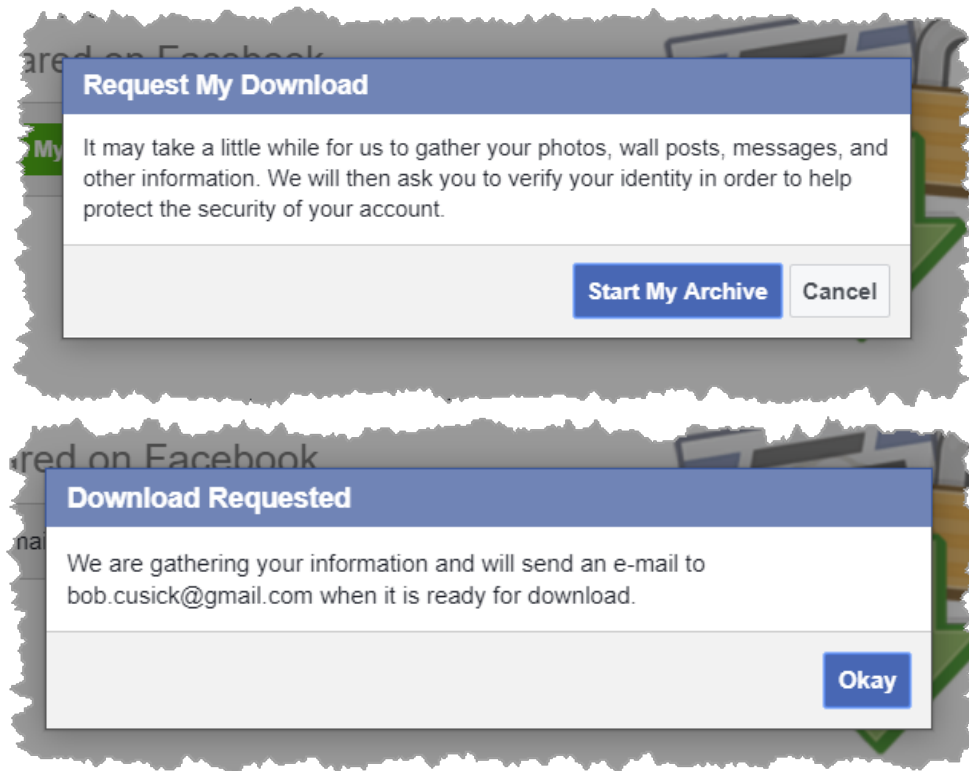

Once you click on that – you’ll see the “Are you sure” screen:

When you click the “Start My Archive” button - you’ll be prompted to enter your password.

You'll then see a couple of dialogs:

Then – you wait.

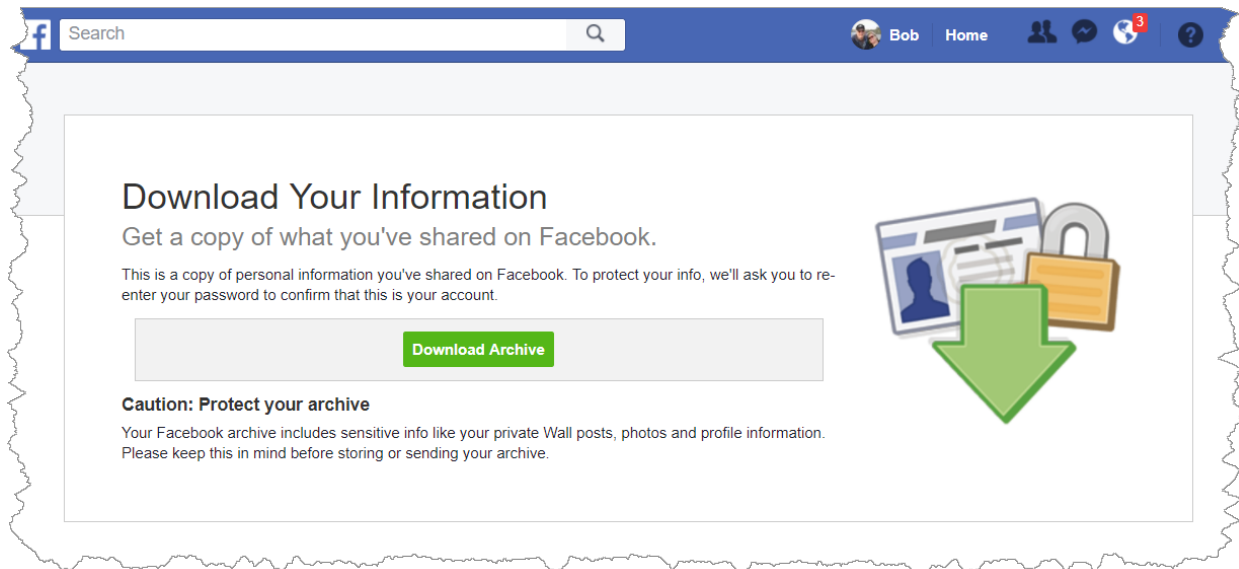

While you're waiting – you may want to check out:

<https://www.facebook.com/help/405183566203254>

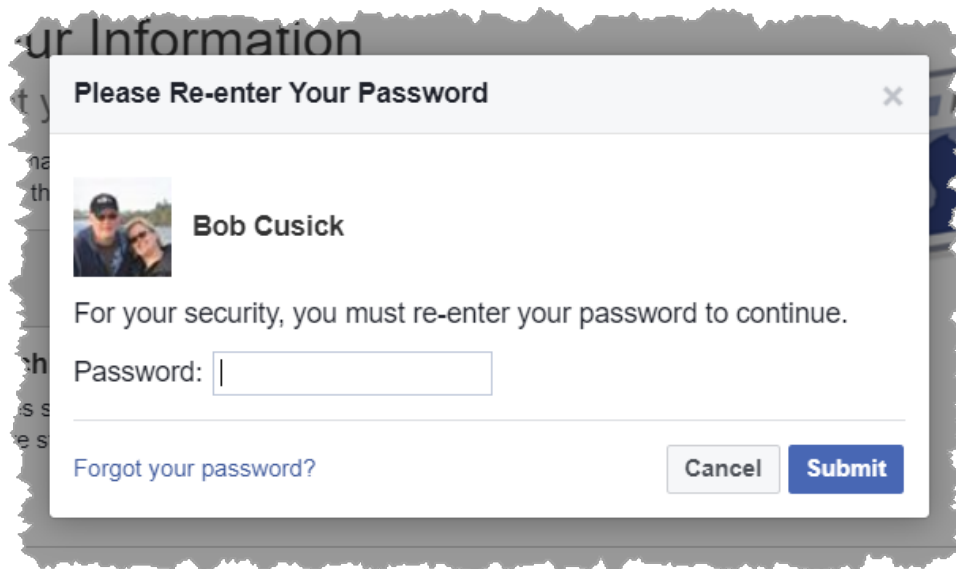

This will tell you all the data you can expect in your download. Quite frankly – I found the list quite disconcerting.

It took about 10 minutes or so for my archive to be ready. You'll get an email with a link to your download.

Once you click the link – it takes you back into Facebook:

Once you click the “Download Archive” button you’ll be prompted for your password again:

Now – you wait. Again.

My download was 592MB. As .zip file! That is HALF A GIGABYTE .zip file! Whoa.

Create a new folder – and put the .zip file in the new folder – and then unzip it. You’ll see a that there are some folders and a file called “index.html”. Double-click the “index.html” file.

OK – so here’s how it starts out. Telling me I joined Friday, August 7, 2007 at 11:39am PDT.

Then, it just goes on from there. It has all the pages I’ve ever liked – even ones I’ve “unliked”, books I’ve read, movies, TV shows, all the groups I’ve ever been a part of, etc. etc.

Then, under “Contact Info” – I see the names and phone numbers (all the phone numbers) of ALL my friends who provided a phone number in their profile (even if it was not visible).

Moving on to “Timeline” – there is EVERY SINGLE POST I’ve ever made. Even ones where I made no comment (e.g. just uploaded a picture).

It also has all the stories I shared (where I pasted a link in):

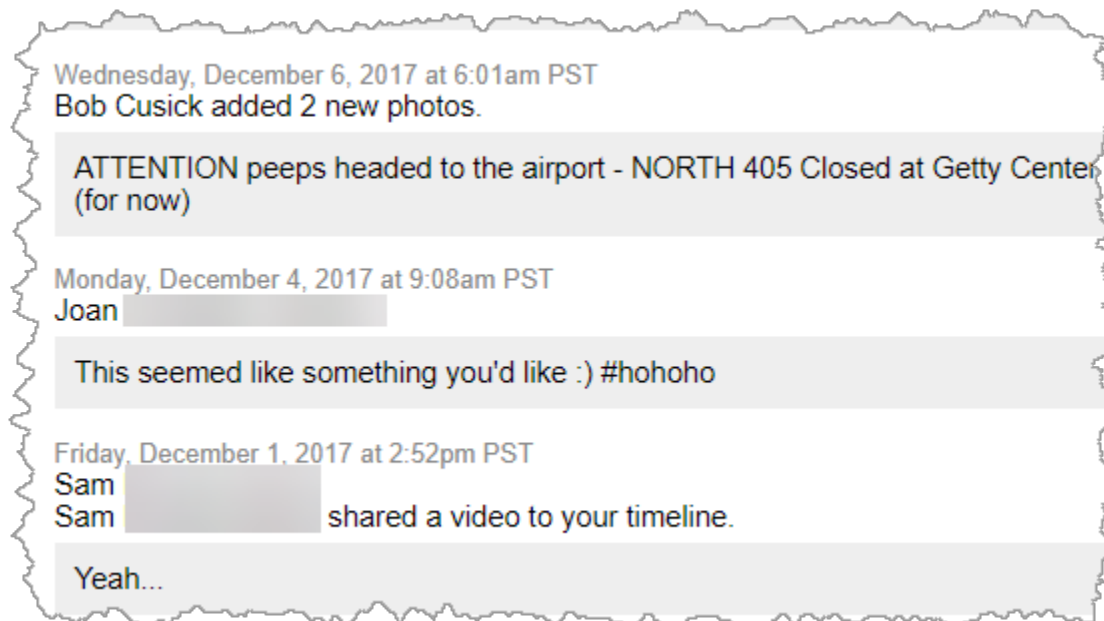

It contains the names of anyone I tagged in any post:

It has the name of the person (or page) of every photo I've "shared":

It has all the times I posted from my mobile app, as well as when anyone posted on my page:

So.... Ummmm.... Yeah. Everything.

Then I moved on to “Photos”... and while it looked like it was random – I realized that they were just the ALBUMS that I had photos in. It also contained all the comments on that album:

Bob Cusick Hey Alex - they lasted about 8,000 miles (mostly canyon riding)... I was replacing a set of Dunlop Pilot Road 2's with another set of Dunlop Pilot Road 2's - a LOT! The FJR came with Metzlers originally after 7,100 miles. These tires are AWESOME. About $350 for the

Ummmm... here's the thing. If you CLICK on the album name:

It has EVERY SINGLE PHOTO you've ever posted – along with the comments under each photo.

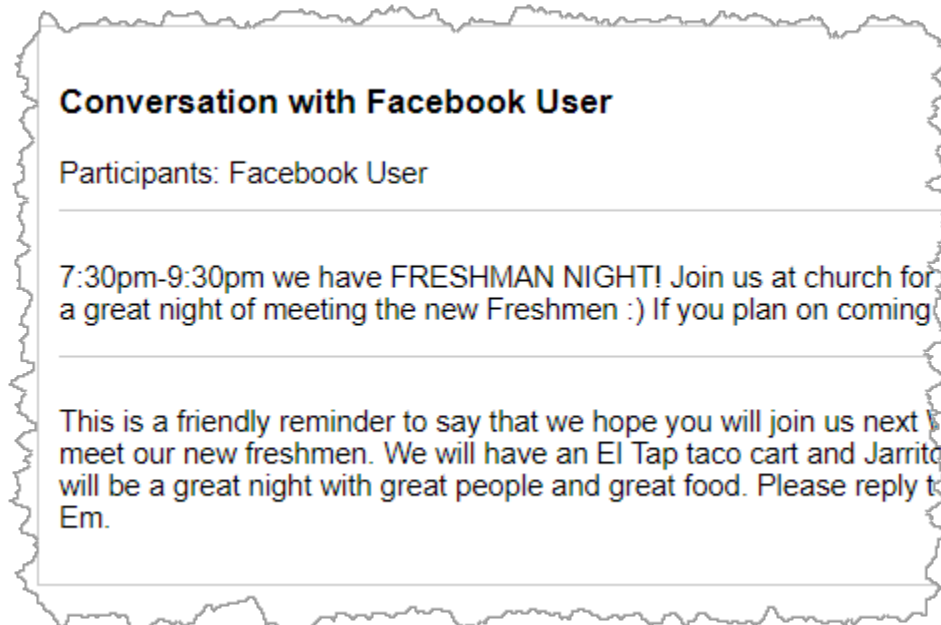

I guess the “good news” is that it appears as if they only take the first 9,999 pictures. For example, I've posted over 13,000 (!) timeline photos – but they “only” downloaded 9,999:

Moving on to “Videos” – it was a collection of ALL the videos I had uploaded – along with a couple Facebook-produced “Bob’s Friends” type of videos that I had shared! The interesting thing is that you can click on them and they'll play (they are downloaded to your local drive).

Next we get to “Friends”. This was sort of a “ripper” for me.
It shows all my current Friends (and the date we became friends).
It shows everyone I’ve sent a Friend Request to (and date).
It shows everyone I’ve Declined a Friend Request (and date).
It shows everyone I’ve Removed – “unfriended” (and date).
And it show all my Followers and Followees (the people I follow).

Messages – ALL THE MESSAGES. This includes messages where someone spammed me – and I guess they were blocked or it was to a group I was in because all it says is “Facebook User”:

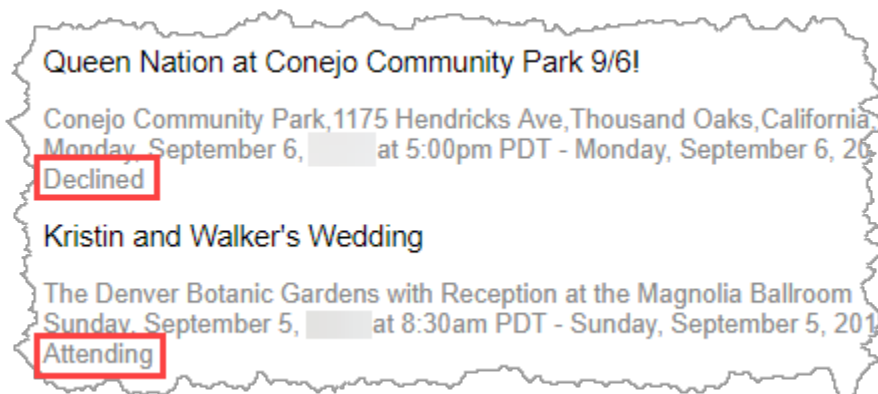

There are also ALL of the messages between me and individuals – INCLUDING any photos or links or files (photos, pdf files, icons, sound files) were included in the conversation. While there are some gaps – I was able to click on a link to a sound file someone messaged me – as well as a pdf that I uploaded to someone else in another conversation.

They even keep the emojis:

Now we move on to “Events”. This has a list of EVERY event I was ever INVITED to – as well as my response:

Under “Security” it has EVERY SINGLE login session I’ve ever done. It also includes the Date, IP address, browser (and platform) as well as the last two digits of the security cookie:

There is the “Applications” link – but if you read my last article I got RID of all the applications that I “logged in with Facebook” – except one. That was the only one that showed up under my “Applications” link.

Now we move on to the Grand Finale – the “Ads” section. This contains “Ads Topics”:

Bob Cusick

Ads Topics WTF??

- History (European TV channel)
- Panties
- Top Gear (magazine)
- Avocado
- Grace (Mandy Capristo album)
- Christianity
- Sacha Baron Cohen
- Sound
- Religion
- House of Cards (U.S. TV series)
- Love
- Construction

It also contains an “Ads History” – with every single ad I clicked on:

The thing that REALLY was interesting – was the very last section
“Advertisers with your contact info” :

Mine had 221 COMPANIES that have my contact info. Just by looking at the list here – it appears as if I logged in while in The Netherlands – as most of these companies are Dutch.

So – what can you do about it?

- You can contact all the companies (221!) who have your contact data and tell them to delete it;
- You can shrug your shoulders and count it as a cost of being social
- You can plan your Frexit (Facebook Exit)

Whatever you decide – I hope you found this guide... ummmmm... “Enlightening.”
